King of Hungary and Poland Louis I daughter Jadwiga married LDK duke Jogaila in 1386. Jadwiga had Hungarian origins and was the queen of Poland.

In this picture you can see a monument for Jadwiga and Jogaila being unveiled. Their marriage led to that the last pagan country in Europe – Lithuania became a catholic country.

The monument was unveiled by the minister of foreign affairs of Lithuania Linas Linkevičius and his colleague Janos Martonyi.

The monument is located in Budapest near one of the main gates of the old town, in the park of Europe.

When Stephen Báthory was the king of Poland and Lithuania, around 10 000 hungarians came to Poland and Lithuania.

Hungarians consisted one-tenth of the Lithuanian-Polish army. These warriors were succesful and helped to win the war of Livonia.

A hungarian nobleman Janus Eperjes bought a manor in Panemunė. He built a castle here for his beloved lithuanian Uršulė.

A memorial plaque at the Gates of Dawn (Aušros Vartai) in Vilnius, commemorated in 1956. revolution in Hungary. Lithuanians supported the events on November 1, 1956, and an unauthorized rally took place during All Souls' Day.

From 1992 until now, Ikarus buses have traveled almost 94 million kilometers in Kaunas, which is the distance from the Earth to Mars and back. These buses transported about 330 million Kaunas residents and guests on public transport routes.

In Kaunas, as in the whole of Lithuania, Ikarus busses has been driving since 1958.
